

MANY WOULD KEEP AX FROM CITY PARK

Violent Opposition Registered Against Proposed Plan to Top Some of the Trees There.

NO ACTION HAS BEEN TAKEN

Those Who Favor the Work Insist It is Necessary to Preserve Their Life and Beauty.

Whether or not it is advisable and necessary to trim some of the trees in Shields Park is a question that has resulted in much discussion in this city. The matter originated when it was proposed in the city council at the last meeting that bids be received for trimming and topping such trees in the park as might be designated. A vote on the motion resulted in a tie and Mayor Burkart voted in favor of it only after commenting that two members of the park committee are in favor of the work and two are opposed and that no action will be taken until the matter is again presented to the council. It appears that the difference of opinion expressed among the councilmen is prevalent throughout the city.

Those in favor of having the trees topped or trimmed declare that they are getting old and the branches are not as strong as formerly. As a result, they declare, the large branches are broken off during heavy wind storms and some of the most beautiful trees in the park are rapidly getting in bad shape. They also contend that the work is essential to preserve the life as well as the symmetrical beauty of the trees.

Those who are opposed to the work declare that an ax should not be permitted in the park. The only exception they say, is when a branch breaks and must be removed in order to save the tree or when some of the smaller branches are sawed off to keep the trees symmetrical. It is declared by some that the most beautiful trees in the city are those which have not been topped but have grown as nature dictated. The tree trimmed advocates declare that if the trees are trimmed each year their shape can be maintained and their growth will be more healthy.

It has been suggested that in some places in the park the trees may be planted too close together with the result that the branches do not have room to spread. In a few spots

CONTESTS ARISE AS TO DELEGATES

Credentials Presented by Some Small Powers' Representatives Questioned at Peace Parley.

MAY BE BALKAN SITUATION

General Peace Conference May Be Resumed Tomorrow—Closed Parley Held Today.

By United Press.

Paris, January 20—President Wilson met representatives of Great Britain, France Italy and Japan in a closed conference this morning to take up contests arising from credentials of some of the small nations' delegates. These contests must be settled before the peace congress can get down to business on the league of nations.

While nothing has been made public concerning any conflict in regard to representation it has been known that the Balkan situation presented opportunity for such trouble.

No date has been set for resumption of the general peace conference, but it was expected to get under way tomorrow. Meanwhile memoranda on the league of nations, international labor legislation and responsibility for the beginning and continuance of the war was submitted today.

A committee on credentials consisting of a representative of each of the nations present was appointed at Saturday's meeting. Today's conference on this matter, however, opened with only the five big powers represented.

The supreme council of the associated powers today took up the Russian situation which is recognized as the greatest obstacle to a quick peace settlement and the establishment of a league of nations. The meeting was attended by two delegates of each of the five great nations, President Wilson and Secretary Lansing representing the United States.

That no indefinite understanding was reached concerning representation for the various Russian factions was indicated by the official announcement that the council would continue its hearing on Russian affairs today. The meeting was announced by French Ambassador Noulens who recently returned from Russia.

President Wilson went from the meeting to the French senate where he had luncheon as the guest of the members of that body.

WOMEN DOMINATE ELECTION THROUGH GERMANY SUNDAY

Spartacans Attempt to Destroy Ballot Boxes and Continue Riots During Night.

By United Press.

Copenhagen January 20.—Street fighting which broke out in Berlin when Spartacans attempted to destroy ballot boxes throughout the city yesterday afternoon, continued through the night, according to dispatches received from Berlin today. The Spartacans attempted to storm the Vorwaerts building and there was particularly severe fighting but the insurgents were repulsed ever where.

The national elections in Germany on Sunday were dominated by women who were voting and running for office for the first time in the history of the country. In practically every district the women were in great majority over the men. There were at least one or two women running on each ticket in every district. The majority socialists were expected to have things practically their own way in most parts of the country.

EBERT IS ANXIOUS FOR PEACE TO COME

German Chancellor Says He Wants Final Settlement on Wilson's Fourteen Principles.

GOVERNMENT ORGANIZING

Germany Must Have Food and Materials to Meet Conditions of Unrest, He Asserts.

By United Press.

Berlin, January 20—Chancellor Ebert declared today that Germany will do everything to comply with peace conditions based on President Wilson's fourteen points, but if the allies make further demands he will not take the responsibility of signing the peace terms. He said Germany needs peace immediately, that she must get food and materials so her people can get to work. The Spartacans lost their revolt, he stated, and no further serious outbreaks will occur if the people are fed.

Asked what he thought of the responsible for the war, Ebert said: "I feel the blame was not Germany's alone."

The conversation was directed to the Spartacan uprising.

"We need peace immediately, so we can get food and materials that will enable the people to go to work," he said.

"The charge that the government encouraged the disorders is absolutely false. The reason we did nothing against Bolshevism at the beginning of the revolution was that the army, flocking homeward after the armistice, was disorganized and useless. Now, the government forces have been rebuilt and we intend to use every means to suppress Bolshevism, which without doubt, is an enemy to society."

"The great danger of a Bolshevik victory is over. The struggle centered about Liebknecht and his associates in Berlin. There are still traces of Bolshevism in certain centers outside of Berlin nourished by agitators."

"Examination of captured Spartacans showed that they were mostly undernourished, sub-normal persons. If they are fed, we need expect no further serious outbreaks. If they are not fed, we must be ready for anything. There is a sort of desperation in certain circles a feeling that nothing makes any difference. These people are the victims of agitators who, we are certain, are supplied with Russian gold."

"As soon as the economic situation clears up normal life will start again and internal troubles will cease. It is a question of peace and help from the entente."

Art League Meeting.

The business meeting of the Seymour Art League that was postponed last week on account of an insufficient number of members in attendance has been called for Tuesday evening at 7:30. The meeting will be conducted at the high school as was scheduled before. Election of new officers and a discussion of plans to be employed in opening the annual art exhibit in the spring are the main issues to come before the meeting. All members are requested to be present and all others interested in the work of the league are cordially invited to attend.

Members and enthusiasts of the S. H. S. basket ball team wish it made known that Gearhardt, "star" center of the Columbus quintet, has their utmost sympathy. It is known that James, local center, was one of the two players that greatly embarrassed the "star" but the second person appears to be unknown. The probability, however, is that James so thoroughly covered the Columbus center that the guarding ability displayed was equal to that of two ordinary players. Thus it can easily be seen that James qualifies for both parties that so "greatly embarrassed" the "star" center, according to the Columbus Republican report of the game.

RUSSIAN PRINCESSES
LEARN TO TRIM HATSY. W. C. A. Saves Wife of General
From Becoming Charwoman.

When the war work of the Y. W. C. A. in Russia has all been told one of the most interesting stories will lie in the establishment of the first Women's Co-operative Association at Moscow.

There day after day princesses work side by side with peasant girls, wives of high Russian officials make dresses or trim hats at long tables with simple, unlettered women, and the money is used for self support of these princesses and notable women as well as for the peasant classes.

The need and suffering throughout all Russia was so great at the time the Association was established that it was a problem to find where the money would help the greatest number of people. It was thought best to expend it to help capitalize organizations for giving work and permanent opportunities to families and individuals to earn their own living.

The women bring their handiwork to the Association for sale or take orders to do dressmaking, millinery, etc., in the rooms of the society or at home. Suitable work was found just in time not long ago to keep the wife of one of Russia's greatest generals from going out as a charwoman to earn bread for her husband, who was ill.

Private Henry Helmeyer, of Camp Taylor, Ky., spent Sunday the guest of William Weinert and family at Pleasant Grove and Carl White and family at Cortland.

CUPID'S DAYDREAM

By MARY J. HAYES.

"What right has this man to upset my home and induce my wife into a public life, when her duty is with her husband and baby?" thundered Mr. Merrill as he threw his paper aside and jumped up from the Morris chair. "But, Alec," his wife pleaded, "I'm just tired of this dingy little place, and baby is whining all the time. Mr. Cardl has made arrangements for my first appearance on next Tuesday evening. Mother is coming over in the morning to take baby, and I shall manage to get into the city before dinner and rehearse with Mr. Cardl in the afternoon."

"My dear girl, you are making a blind mistake in heeding this man's advice. You will be sor—"

"It is useless," interrupted Marie, "for you to try to alter my plans, for when my mind is set I mean to carry it out."

Alec crossed the room and stood in front of the French window. The moon lit up his face as he glanced out upon his acres of golden wheat and corn.

"So Mr. Cardl has succeeded at last," he was thinking. "Yes, his own little innocent Marie had been persuaded by this miserable wretch." All his happiness was to be ruined, his little cottage, all his newly found joys and comforts of farm life, and baby—what was to become of him? He would grow up without a mother's love and care.

At length he turned toward where his wife had been standing, but she was not there. Shutting off the light, he went upstairs. As he passed her door he stopped. Perhaps at this very moment she was packing. Would he knock? No, he mustn't. He would let her carry out her plans, as she said, and perhaps some day she would realize her fault and come back to him.

The next evening found Marie in a handsome chamber in one of the most fashionable hotels of the city. She was thinking over the events of the day. She had met and rehearsed with Professor Cardl as had been arranged, and he had told her of the remarkable talent she possessed. Never before had she realized it. As she sat gazing at all the luxuries about her she acknowledged to herself how wrong she had been in partaking of such things that were all so unnatural to her; but her heart, swelling with pride, rebelled against these thoughts.

Every morning for nearly a week she spent with a dressmaker. Her afternoons were given for rehearsals, and in the evenings she joined Mr. Cardl in theater parties and dances. The night before her performance she retired early. These new excitements were all too much for her, and she lay awake thinking of baby and Alec, and how she longed to be with them now.

The next morning she arose earlier than usual, having spent a restless night. As she stood before the long mirror, and the dressmaker's skilled fingers worked busily with her costume, she longed for her bungalow apron and heaved a sigh of relief when the garment was finished and carefully tucked in her wardrobe. That afternoon she spent rehearsing, and at 5 o'clock with Mr. Cardl. Seven o'clock found her very much excited and nervous. Later in the evening Mr. Cardl called to accompany her to the theater.

She came upon the stage, her eyes beaming with success, but with an aching pain tugging at her heart. "If Alec could only see now, how proud he would be of her," she consoled herself.

The orchestra sounded the chord, and Marie, forgetting her troubles, began her selection. Her loud voice rang out clearly and sweetly and won the hearts of her audience. The applause with which her first selection was greeted delighted Marie, and in the height of her success, she reached for a telegram, which a messenger boy slipped into her hand, and in an audible whisper, she read, "baby died this morning, Alec." The audience looked from one to another in amazement, and Marie fell back in a dead faint.

Grandma Merrill, hearing the loud noise on the piazza, dropped the saucy pan of potatoes that she was paring, and rushed out to the front door, only to find Marie rubbing her eyes with one hand, and shielding the bump on her forehead with the other.

"... and it was only a dream after all," Marie was saying, as Alec appeared on the scene a few minutes later. Just then baby began to cry and Marie was spared the humiliation of explaining the dream, while all attention was turned to Alec, Jr.

Matter of Gender.

The bell of a Scottish church was giving out a very poor tone, and a committee was appointed to inquire as to what was wrong and to report on the best means of putting it right. After an examination the members were divided in their opinion, and the clerk officer, who was in attendance with the keys, was asked his view. "Fine. A ken what's wrang wi' the bell," he remarked. "It's a shee-yin"—meaning that it was of the feminine gender. Pressed to explain, he added: "It's tongue's owre lang—it's needin' to be clippit!" And this turned out to be really the fault. The tongue had become loosened to the extent of an inch or so, and was overlapping the curve at the rim, and therefore not striking truly.

FOOTBALL IS ANCIENT SPORT

Was Popular Among the Old Romans and Also Found Some Favor
With the Florentines.

Can you imagine Julius Caesar playing quarterback on the Rome university eleven, or Brutus skirting the end in those days when the forum was as busy as a three-ring circus? No? Nevertheless it was a probability, for it appears now that football originated with the Romans.

A few uneducated persons used to think that football was of Greek invention; but Trench and Camp's trained news hounds, aided by Italian propagandists, have fastened it on Rome. The Romans, not really knowing that it was football, called it "calcium." It appears to have been a goodly, rough-going game, full of spirit, feet and broken elbows, played more on the soccer order than the Rugby style in common favor.

With the fall of the Roman empire "calcium" also fell out of the spotlight, not to appear in favor until the time of the Florentines and their Medici. There is no record of Machiavelli having participated in the games, but we imagine that if he did he played a foxy, clever game. Giovanni de Bardi, a well-known Florentine newspaper man, wrote as follows in 1580:

"The calcio (later name) is a public game played between two groups of young men on foot, not armed, who playfully compete in making a ball, by means of their feet, pass outside of a certain line back of the opposite group. The ball is mediocre in size, filled with wind, and the game is played purely for the honor of winning."

A Cattle Queen.

A cattle-shipping season to the Eastern stockyards is in full blast, and Mary Vail, Los Angeles heiress, said to be the richest maiden in California, is in these large sales and shipments, figuring as a notable cattle queen. Miss Vail is the daughter of the late Walter Vail, who had over 300,000 head of steers and sheep on his famous ranches. Under the direction of Miss Vail and her mother the cattle domain left by the father and husband greatly increased in value. The meat barons are paying them $1,000,000 for steers and sheep this fall.—San Francisco Bulletin.

MARSHAL FOCH PRAISES
VALOR OF AMERICANSSays They Are Superb Soldiers and Have "The Devil's Own Punch."

In speaking to the American newspaper correspondents in Paris, Marshal Foch praised the work of the American troops and said that Gen. Pershing had asked that the American forces be concentrated for an attack on one sector. The allied Generalissimo admitted that the Argonne-Meuse front, where the Americans began their offensive on September 25, was a "sector hard to tackle." The Marshal said he had told Gen. Pershing:

"Your men have the devil's own punch. They will get away with all that. Go to it."

The American attack succeeded, the Marshal continued, "and here we are on the Rhine."

"This for me," Marshal Foch began, "is a happy opportunity to tell you all the good things I think of the American army and of the part it played on our side. Your soldiers were superb. They came to us young, enthusiastic and carried forward by a vigorous idealism, and they marched to battle with admirable gallantry."

"Yes, they were superb. There is no other word. When they appeared our armies were, as you know, fatigued by three years of relentless struggle and the mantle of war laid heavily upon them."

"We were magnificently comforted by the virility of your Americans."

"The youth of the United States brought a renewal of the hope that hastened victory. Not only was this moral fact of the highest importance, but you also brought enormous material aid, and the wealth which you placed at our disposal contributed to the final success. Nobody among us will ever forget what America did."

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Carter and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Roeger went to Indianapolis today to attend the State Grange meeting.

Oliver as state Director of the Work. Dr. Oliver was associated with the Commission for two years, but was called to Wisconsin in 1917 and made Director of the War History Commission of that state. He later entered the artillery branch of the service, receiving his discharge two weeks ago. By training and experience Dr. Oliver is especially well fitted for directing this work. For the last five years he has made a special study of the military history and policies of the United States, and was recently called to Washington to confer with the staff of the Army War College on the matter of preparing the great financial history of America's part in the war. He will proceed at once through the cooperation of the State Council of Defense and the County Councils of Defense to organize and collect this material with the ultimate aim of the State publishing a great memorial history of Indiana's part in the World War.

A Thousand Yous

When you pick up your morning or afternoon newspaper and glance over the advertising you quite unconsciously multiply yourself a thousand times.

In half or three-quarters of an hour you can, metaphorically speaking, visit every progressive store in town. You virtually poke your head into every department of every department store. You run into the florist's, the confectioner's, the oculist's, the leading groceries, banks, theatres, all the various places that supply the things that make this twentieth century and life worth the living. Here is a greater choice in clothing, food, furniture, books, pictures, musical instruments, travel, entertainment, opportunities for investment, the service of public utility corporations than any monarch of old could command.

It would easily take a thousands yous, traveling hard all day, to find out for yourself what the advertisements tell you in a few minutes morning or evening.

They deserve your attention. They deserve your confidence. Without them, without the progressive spirit of the merchants and manufacturers who back them, the great abundance of things you now enjoy would be a memory—or something still to be realized. Without advertising the prices you would have to pay for many of the necessities you now buy for a few pennies would make a dollar look like a snow ball on the kitchen range.

Read the advertisements. Read them for your own information and advantage. Read them to encourage the advertisers who are making these better things possible for you.

WEEVILS CAUSE SERIOUS LOSSES

Harvest Beans, Peas and Cow-peas Promptly After Maturity to Prevent Damage.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The serious losses caused by bean and pea weevils—which amounts to millions of dollars annually—is largely preventable, and by putting a stop to it a valuable and much-needed source of the nation's food supply can be saved. No satisfactory artificial remedies can be applied to kill weevil grubs in beans, peas or cowpeas growing in the field, but they can be easily and effectively controlled afterward if the necessary care is given. The crop should be harvested as soon as possible after maturity, and the seeds thrashed or shelled and treated by fumigation, heat or cold storage. In order to kill the weevils in them before they can increase in numbers and carry on their destructive work.

Weevils not only cause serious damage to peas, beans and cowpeas in storage but also in the field, and are responsible for a curtailment in the acreage planted in these crops. In some sections, particularly the coastal regions of the middle Atlantic states, this pest has carried on its work of destruction so successfully that growers have become discouraged and have discontinued to produce on a commercial scale these valuable food crops. Badly infested seeds are worthless for planting. In one experiment on record only 50 per cent of infested beans germinated, and of these 30 per cent were so badly injured that they could not develop into normal plants.

Harvest All Seed.

In gathering the crop, exercise care, the bulletin urges, to leave no portion of it in the field, as seeds scattered on the ground or left in shattered pods on the dried vines, may carry the pest over winter, and furnish a supply of weevils the following summer. The crop should be harvested as soon as possible after reaching maturity and the seed thrashed or shelled soon afterwards. Storing in the pod does not confine the weevils. Immediately on placing the seed in storage, fumigate with carbon disulphid or carbon tetrachlorid. These chemicals when exposed to the air vaporize into a heavy poisonous gas which immediately kills the weevil. Carbon disulphid is the more generally used, though carbon tetrachlorid has the advantage of not being inflammable. Seed to be fumigated should be placed in an air-tight container, such as a tin can or barrel. The chemicals, used at the rate of from 2 to 4 pounds to each 500 cubic feet of space to be fumigated, should be poured over the top of the seed, and fumigation should continue for from 24 to 48 hours.

When there is only a small quantity of seed, the weevil may be killed by heating the seed in the oven for several hours. The oven should not be hotter than 120 to 145 degrees Fahrenheit. Dipping seed in boiling water for one minute is also an effective remedy. Weevils will not feed or cause damage at low temperatures, and if seed can be kept in cold storage at a temperature of 32 to 43 degrees Fahrenheit, no trouble from this pest will result.

PROPER FEEDING HELPS COW

If Rightly Fed All Her Life Animal Will Be of Value When Old—Overfeeding Is Harmful.

If the cow has been rightly fed all her life she will be a good cow when she becomes old. A cow that has been overfed for years will have become "burned out" by the time she is ten or twelve years of age. The cow that has never been fed to bring her up to her highest capacity for milk giving will have fixed her habits of milk production at a low point and will not be valuable as an old cow. She will, therefore, have to be disposed of to the butcher several years before she would otherwise have gone out of service.

Discharging The Editor

By UNA BARLOWE

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was the third time within two days that Olive Claggett had called in the office of Bennett Stokes, the managing editor, and she was well aware that her resulting feeling of embarrassment was caused by something more than the fact that she had come on an errand, the desired result of which would be most unfavorable to Bennett Stokes.

"The 'something more' Olive had felt always when in Bennett's presence from the first day she met him. It was this that made her on all occasions go out of her way to avoid him. For Olive Claggett convinced herself that she had not the slightest desire to fall under the sway of such fascination as Bennett might exert over her.

Her newly acquired job as business manager of the Morning Banner was far too important to be imperiled by any such distractions. But now she had come entirely in the interests of the Banner—she had been delegated to go by those who she felt had the interests of the Banner most at heart.

She had asked for an interview with Mr. Fordyce, the owner of the Banner. But he was away.

"You told me, you know, that you would be able to tell me something definite by this time," Olive said with distinctness, trying to avoid the smile that crept into Bennett's gray eyes. "If he is not in town and won't be, I will find it worth while to go to him. You ought at least to tell me where he is to be found."

"Yes, quite so," mused Bennett, turning over with a tinge of embarrassment some manuscript that lay half read on his editorial desk. "That would at least seem fair—but the fact is that Fordyce is an odd sort of fellow. Hasn't personally visited the office for I'm sure I don't know how long. Suppose you write a letter to him and I'll see that it gets to him."

Stokes had already made this suggestion, which had met with Olive's disapproval, but the matter was important. The entire success of the Banner depended on laying her proposition before Mr. Fordyce without delay, so with an expression that made it quite apparent to Bennett that she held him personally responsible for the inaccessibility of their chief she withdrew, promising to have the letter ready before the evening was over.

It was a harder letter to write than even Olive had anticipated, but as business manager of a morning paper she had no pressing duties at that time, and while the editorial force and compositors and pressmen were working under the grim concentration necessary to get even so unpretentious a paper out as the Morning Banner, she was rather deliberately composing the important letter.

She waited until the paper was well in the hands of the composing room before she again sought Mr. Stokes in his office. She had thought twice before she had sealed the envelope—and then she had sealed it.

After all, there was no reason why she should leave it open, she was asking Stokes no personal favor in seeing that it was addressed and if he did read it—but something assured her that Mr. Stokes was too honorable for that.

"Won't you wait just two or three minutes—till I get my desk cleared?" he said as she turned to leave the room. "I wish I might walk home with you. It is rather late."

"Thank you, no," Olive said in spite of a desire that was strong within her. "I am going with one of the girls—we are quite used to it, you know."

Bennett waited only till Olive had got halfway down the corridor; then he arose quietly, pushed the door shut, returned to his desk and deliberately broke open the sealed flap of the letter to Mr. Fordyce.

The proposition was clearly put. It was not Olive's proposition, but one that had been formulated by the entire staff of the Banner, save, of course, Mr. Stokes, who had always failed to attend the weekly meetings of the personnel of the paper. Now, as every one knew, the Morning Banner had been especially hard hit by the draft.

Composed as it was almost entirely of young college graduates, who sought this way to receive their newspaper apprenticeship, a dozen or so of the most active men in editorial and business departments had gone off with the first call. Results would have been dire indeed had it not been for the women who pluckily filled in the places higher up, calling other women to take their recently abandoned subordinate places.

Olive herself had been right-hand "man" to the business manager, but when he enlisted she shifted into his swivel chair and had worked with eagerness and complete devotion for the Banner. The editorial staff had been so hard hit that no one remained but Mr. Stokes; all his reporters and assistants were women.

The constant going off of men in the composing room and pressroom suggested getting women in to do the work. It had been tried successfully by another paper. In fact Olive told Mr. Fordyce in the letter that she had investigated this and would guarantee the entire satisfaction of a feminine composing and pressroom.

Now as matters stood the manlessness of the Banner worked a little in its disfavor. But it had been determined that if the paper could be made entirely woman-run, the achievement would be so novel that the Banner would immediately become a paper of nationwide distinction. Feminists would be eager for it. It would be watched and quoted, and even joked about, but all that would help the circulation and the advertising. If Mr. Fordyce looked favorably on the proposition, would he please discharge the managing editor?

The young woman who was now the city editor was really qualified for the job. The few remaining males who now worked as office boys and shipping clerks could be easily replaced by women and a new era would open for the Banner—the Banner would become famous the world over as a paper run entirely by women.

Bennett Stokes read the letter twice, then he looked intently at the begrimmed ceiling of his office and lighted his pipe. Then he laughed a little grimly, replaced the letter in its torn envelope, put it in his pocket and stepped quietly to the door, opened it and looked first to the left then to the right. At the right he encountered the eyes of Olive Claggett standing a few feet away.

"I couldn't help but see," she said. "Mr. Stokes, I didn't believe you were capable of doing such a thing."

Then with a sudden courageousness Bennett blocked the passage as Olive tried to force her way by.

"Good night," she said. "I hope when you are quite through with Mr. Fordyce's letter you will forward it to him." By this time Bennett had two strong hands on Olive's wrists and was guiding her in spite of herself into the room. He closed the door behind them and ordered her rather than asked her to take a chair.

"I'm not going to discuss the letter now," he said. "The idea's a good one, but I'm thinking about something else. Ever since you've been here, Miss Claggett, you have avoided me and have made me feel that you bore me a grudge—and the funny thing is that I've been curiously drawn to you. It's one of those things that a man can't help—that sort of foreordained witchery of one woman. I'm not blaming you—heaven knows you have fought against exerting it if you ever were aware that you had it. I'm simply asking you to tell me the cause for your antipathy."

"But it wasn't my idea to ask for your resignation," Olive said. In spite of herself she felt hot tears welling into her eyes. "I shall miss you very, very much—more than you can possibly know. I wrote the letter because I was delegated to do so, and I knew my duty was first by the Banner. Besides, there are bigger things for you to do." And then the business manager broke down completely, and, burying her face first on the side of Bennett's desk and then, as he gently raised it on the rough exterior of the shoulder of the editorial office coat, she said exactly what she had determined never to admit—that she herself felt a strange and compelling attraction to Bennett.

"And when that sort of attraction is mutual there is only one thing to do," Bennett was saying. "There is no longer any question as to the success of the marriage."

There was a knock on the editorial door and the voice of the city editor, suggested as Bennett's successor, called in impatient syllables: "Olive, I thought you were coming."

Olive quickly rose to go, with a look of a guilty schoolgirl.

"But what shall I tell them—about Mr. Fordyce and the letter—"

"Oh, they might as well know," he said. "I'm Mr. Fordyce. Running small town papers is a foolish fad of mine. Yes, tell them they can have it and good luck to them—but they must name a new business manager."

Soldier's Decoration Conferred as Reward for Assuaging the Thirst of Emperor Napoleon.

There is a good story of one of Bonaparte's veterans, who, after the distribution of medals of the Legion of Honor, which he expected but did not receive, could contain himself no longer and went to the emperor to demand satisfaction.

"Do you not remember, sire," he asked, "that when we were in Egypt and you were thirsty I, alone, had a melon, which I shared with you?"

The emperor smiled, saying, "I thank you again, my good man, but giving a melon to a thirsty man does not necessarily carry the cross with it."

The soldier broke into furious speech: "And was I not at Arcola, at Marengo, at Austerlitz? Did I not go to Santo Domingo and cover myself with glory in every battle? Yet you cannot remember a melon! Pshaw!"

The emperor smiled again. "Why did you not tell me all that before?" he asked. "Of course you shall have your cross."

"But is it for the battles or for the melon?" the soldier demanded. "Any fool can go into battle, but not every

URGES FISH MEAL FOR HOGS

Tests Conducted by Agricultural Department Show It Is Equal to Tankage in Feed Value.

To stimulate greater interest in the production of fish meal, which is a good substitute for tankage in the feeding of hogs, a representative of the United States department of agriculture recently visited a number of fisheries along the gulf coast as well as a number of marketing centers in the South. Tests conducted by the department show that fish meal is equal in feeding value to tankage. It contains about 57 per cent protein. It is made by drying nonedible fish and grinding fine. This meal is being used at the government farm at Beltsville, Md., to replace tankage. The menhaden fisheries on the Atlantic coast can produce annually 10,000 tons of fish meal. Fisheries along the gulf states and Mississippi river have been wasting or manufacturing as fertilizer large quantities of nonedible fish.

Especially do we thank Mr. Hustedt, the undertaker, and Bro. F. A. Hayward, for his consoling words, also the singers and those who sent the many beautiful floral offerings. They will always be held in grateful remembrance by Mr. and Mrs. George Harris and the grandchildren.

W. L. Johnson, North Ewing street, awoke with the rising of the sun this morning and as he opened the door the flood of sunshine that enveloped the city park, one block from his residence, burst full upon him and with it came a medley of birdsong. It was as if all the winged creatures of the air had gathered in the park for a daybreak serenade. Mr. Johnson was struck so by such an unusual thing as the spring song of birds coming in mid winter that he stood in the doorway listening while every moment added new notes to the aerial choir. Nature led her singers to the city's little woodland where human agency has never defaced with saw and axe the invaluable gift of time, full topped trees, symmetrical and beautiful in natural integrity.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hinderlider, of Medora, were here this morning on their way to New Orleans for a several weeks' visit.

OBJECTIONS MADE TO BONE DRY BILL

Opposition to Wright Prohibition Measure May Split Dry Forces in House.

STATE HIGHWAY LEGISLATION

Another Bill is Framed to Increase the Salaries of Members of Senate and House.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, Ind., January 20.—Opposition arising over the week-end recess to the Wright prohibition bill, which would make Indiana bone-dry, today threatened to split the dry forces in the house, or to effect considerable modification and revision of the measure.

Representative Charles L. Mendenhall, majority floor leader in the house who is a dry said he is opposed to the measure because he does not believe that it would be to the best interests of the people of the state, and it would threaten the personal liberties of many innocent citizens.

Upon adjournment of the house Friday, Mr. Wright stated that he would report the bill out of the committee on public morals with recommendation that it be passed as drafted, there having been no opposition registered when the committee met. Mr. Mendenhall states he was not present at the meeting of the committee although he is a member of the public morals committee.

The new state highway commission bill was expected to be introduced by Senator Luke W. Duffey, of Indianapolis, late today. The bill will go to the senate, committee on roads, of which Senator Dobyne is chairman, and it is understood that public hearings will be held on the measure before it is reported out of for action by the senate.

Means of obtaining additional compensation for service in the present session of the legislature was put into a bill today and members of the house and senate are attempting to ascertain whether or not they will be able to collect expense money. Indiana legislators now receive $6 per day and twenty cents per mile traveling expenses from their home to Indianapolis and return for one round trip. It is regarded as probable that a bill providing for the increase of salaries of legislators to $10 per day will be introduced within a few days. This will, however, not become effective this session.

Today was the first pay day for employees of the legislature owing to the fact that the $100,000 appropriation bill for the expenses of the session was not passed by the Senate in time before the week-end recess to permit the bill to be signed and approved by the governor.

It was pointed out today that one of the features of the proposed constitutional amendment by Senator A. H. Beardsley, of Elkhart, granting women full suffrage, is that it will prevent aliens, who have not completed their naturalization, from voting.

Germany Has Lost Mexican Trade.

All the drinking glasses and most of the jewelry sold in the Salinas Cruz district of Mexico are of American manufacture, according to a recent report from Norton F. Brand, United States consul at Salinas Cruz. Prior to the war all the jewelry and glassware were imported from Germany and Spain. The war has eliminated Germany entirely from the Mexican markets and the activity of American business men has been so great that imports from Spain have been materially reduced.

But Mr. Brand warns American manufacturers that the goblets and tumblers they ship to Mexico are too small. The tropics are a thirsty climate and Mexicans drink deeply. Mr. Brand declares if American merchants do not send in larger glasses, their wares will be driven from the field when European supplies are again available after the war. He urges upon American business men the necessity of studying the needs of the Mexican trade.

DESOLATE CITY IS NISHAPUR

Home of Writer of the Rubaiyat One of the Most Forbidding Spots on Earth.

The isolated city of Nishapur, in Persia, was the home of the Persian best known of all his nation to the western world—Omar, surnamed Khayyam, or the Tentmaker, author of the Rubaiyat. The poet is still one of the great historic figures in his ancient city, but he is remembered there not as a poet or a tentmaker but as a sage, philosopher, astronomer and mathematician.

Nishapur lies in a barren upland plain, many days' overland journey from the nearest railroad point. It is encircled by mountains, most of which are low and barren. The northern range, however, rises to a considerable height, and through many months of the year its peaks are white with snow. The lower slopes have a curious reddish tint, due to iron in the earth, so that rare and delicate color combinations are formed at dawn and twilight.

Looking southward from his city, Omar saw a level, featureless plain, depressingly treeless, save for here and there a clump of slender poplars. The winter turned it to a lifeless gray; in the summer, pitiless sunlight and choking dust tormented the eyes. Only for a brief spring season did the fresh green of growing crops, the cool mists that rose after the early rains and the rainbow gleams of pale color from the mountains lend the vista a melancholy charm. Beyond the plain rose another row of low hills, and beyond that, he knew, stretched the endless desert. Each year a few weeks of joy and beauty; between mountain and desert a few miles of half kindly man-tilled earth—bits of respite that hardly broke the hostile round of nature—it is easier to understand the defiant pessimism of the Rubaiyat after seeing Nishapur. — Chicago Daily News.

GREAT POET'S LIFE UNHAPPY

John Milton, Wonderfully Gifted Intellectually, Was Yet a Man of Many Sorrows.

The great English poet, Milton, is described at the age of sixteen as "scholarly, accomplished and as handsome a youth as St. Paul's had sent forth." That was at the age when, having finished preparatory school, he was ready for the university.

He was born on Broad street, London. His father was a man of education, with a decided talent for music. Milton inherited all his esthetic qualities—indeed, the rougher element at college called him "the lady," though all recognized his intellectuality. Even at that period, long before he was twenty, he contemplated writing the great "Paradise Lost," which was not finished, it happened, for forty years.

During that long lapse of time Milton had started his reputation by the twin poems, "Il Penseroso" and "L'Allegro"; had married a mere child of seventeen—an unhappy marriage, as it turned out; had written some stirring pamphlets; had almost been killed for opposing the leading politics; had remarried and been left a widower again; had lost his sight; had found the three neglected children of his first marriage not model daughters; had lived in terrible loneliness in spite of his great fame, and had been persuaded to marry a third time, for the sake of being looked after.

He was an old man when the great "Paradise Lost" appeared, which is called "one of the few monumental works of the world," and his death followed some ten years later.

How Tosti Repulsed Bore.

Many famous singers were pupils of Tosti. During one of the busiest of his mornings, when he had a long list of singing lessons to get through, a knock came at the door of his flat. His valet being ill, Tosti went to the door himself. A lady, strange to him, stood on the threshold. "Signor Tosti?" she inquired. Tosti bowed. "Oh," said the lady, "I am singing your song, 'My Memories,' at Manchester tonight, and I want you kindly to run through it with me." "Madam," answered Tosti, politely but firmly, "I fear it is impossible. I have two pupils with me now, and a third is waiting in the ante-room, while others will arrive shortly." "But you must," the lady persisted. "I am sorry—" began Tosti again, when he suddenly received a violent push backwards, and the lady walked into the studio. Tosti followed, protesting. After a long argument, which threatened every moment to become heated, the lady snapped out: "Very well, then, I shan't sing your song." "Madam," said Tosti, taking her by the hand, "I am infinitely obliged to you." The lady gave him one look and fled.

St. Brice and Football.

In November is the festival of St. Brice, who may be called the patron saint of football players, not alone because his feast day comes during the season of the gridiron game, but for quite another reason. St. Brice's day was long generally observed in England, and in the year 1002 the celebration took the form of a general massacre of the Danes. It was on that day, according to tradition, that the English game of football was invented, with the head of a Dane as the ball. St. Brice, of course, was not responsible for either the massacre or the football game, having died some six centuries before. He was a bishop of Tours and lived in the fifth century.

"I SUFFERED SEVEN YEARS"

Was Eventually Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I suffered for seven long years with a lame back, irregularities and pain. I had one physician after another but they did me no good. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and gave it a trial and in a short time I felt benefited and am now feeling fine, and without weakness or pain. Many of my friends have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and been helped by it."—Mrs. MARGARET NESS, 1846 E. Hazzard St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Women who suffer from displacements, irregularities, inflammation, ulceration, backache, sideache, headaches or "the blues" should not rest until they have given this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. If complications exist, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special suggestions. The result of its long experience is at your service.

FURTHER PROHIBITION RESTRICTIONS ARE URGED

Bill Would Prohibit Manufacture or Sale of Dry Beer That Contains Any Alcohol.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, Ind., January 20.—When the legislature reconvened this afternoon after its week-end recess, the public morals committee in the house reported out the Wright bill, proposing to amend the prohibition law, with recommendations that the bill be passed as introduced.

Representative Wright, who fathered the prohibition bill at the 1917 session of the legislature, stated today that when the prohibition bill was passed it was not known by the prohibition leaders in the house that it had been amended so as to permit anyone to retain a small amount of whiskey and beer. The bill reported favorably today would abolish this privilege.

Another feature of the bill reported out today would prohibit the manufacture and sale of "dry beer" on the ground that some of it contains alcohol. Under the new bill, no beverages containing alcohol, no matter how small the quantity, may be sold in the state.

Wright declared that many persons had found means of putting a "kick" in near beer and he is of the opinion that this class of drinks is more harmful in many ways than the regular form of intoxicants.

It is expected that there will be little opposition to the bill introduced by Senator Masters of Indianapolis which would provide for further confiscation of vehicles in which intoxicants are brought into the state.

With these two measures enacted into laws, the Indiana prohibition leaders have stated they are convinced John Barleycorn will officially and finally pass into the great beyond.

Entertain Roumanian Countess at American Show in France.

Picture shows are being put on in France without cameras, scenery or any of the necessary properties, according to reports reaching the National Y. W. C. A. from a Y. W. C. A. nurses' hut in a Base Hospital.

Having no film or camera, the nurses at Base decided to put on a living picture show and invited a group of nurses from a nearby hospital to be the audience. It was a real thriller, one of the wild and woolly west variety, with bucking bronchos and wild rides on broom and mop horses.

Imagination supplied the scenery, with the exception of placards, which announced "the sun" when it was supposed to be shining or "cacti" when the cow punchers rode across the desert.

Countess Vacaesca of Roumania, who had been talking to the nurses on conditions in the German courts at the time she was lady-in-waiting to the Queen of Roumania, was the most appreciative of all the guests.

INSIGNIA, CURTAINS, MADE FROM SKIRTS

Blue broadcloth skirts used for organization insignia and plaid summer dresses reconstructed into window curtains are after war economies of the nine Y. W. C. A. secretaries in Archangel, Russia.

These secretaries have just succeeded, in the face of food and cloth shortages, in opening a Y. W. C. A. Hostess House for American troops stationed in Archangel, a town behind the allied lines. It was necessary to hunt up a voile summer dress which one of the secretaries had discarded for heavy winter clothes in order to have curtains at the windows. They live on regulation army rations.

Archangel is the fourth city in Russia where the Y. W. C. A. has established work. Centers were opened first in Petrograd and Moscow and then in Samara, 900 miles eastward from Moscow.

Miss Elizabeth Boies, head of Russian work and one of the few Americans who remained in that country throughout the revolution, is en route to America by way of England to recruit workers for Russia.

Harry Miller, who has been attending Indiana University, has returned to his home here for a few days. He says that all public places in Bloomington are under quarantine and that the University is open only for lecture periods. After the demobilization of the Student Army Training Corps the University officials went to work on a plan to re-establish military training and Miller says the first day of such activity was entered upon today.

"Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," a new motion picture which is being shown at Indianapolis will be presented at the local theater in March. The seats at Indianapolis are selling as high as $2 each while here the top price will be $1, according to an announcement of the local management.

Harris Tuelker of Vallonia, has been discharged from military service and has returned home. He was here Saturday night visiting friends enroute to Vallonia.

Mrs. Oscar Burbrink, of Jonesville, and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Burbrink and son spent the week-end at Columbus the guest of relatives.

days nor less than forty days prior to the day of election. Candidates for the state bench must be nominated by petition signed by not less than 500 electors while petitions for Circuit or single county court judges must bear the signatures of at least fifty electors of the county in which the office is to be voted upon. The name of not more than one candidate may appear on the same petition, which must be filed with the secretary of state.

It is said that nonpartisan election of judges is especially desirable in counties in which one political party or the other has a large majority. In such counties, a candidate for judge who may be far better equipped for the bench than his opponent, has no chance of election unless he happens to belong to the dominant party in the county. The effect of this, it is being pointed out, is to deprive the bench of the services of men who would make excellent judges, and often to elevate to the bench men who are not well qualified for the position.

Rainbow's End

..A NOVEL..

BY REX BEACH

Copyright, by Harper and Brothers

Old Sebastian's curse had come true; Donna Isabel had met the fate he had called down upon her that day when he hung exhausted in his chains and when the flies tormented him. The treasure for which the woman had intrigued so tirelessly had been her death. Furthermore, as if in grimest irony, she had been permitted at the very last to find it. Living, she had reached to no purpose whatsoever; dying, she had almost grasped it in her arms.

Once the first excitement had abated and a messenger had been sent to town, Cueto drew Esteban aside and questioned him.

"A shocking tragedy and most peculiar," said the overseer. "Nothing could amaze me more. Tell me, how did you come to be there at such an hour, eh?"

Esteban saw the malevolent curiosity in Cueto's face and started. "I—That is my affair. Surely you don't think—"

"Come, come! You can trust me," the overseer winked and smiled.

"I had business that took me there," stifferly declared the younger man.

"Exactly! And a profitable business it proved!" Cueto laughed openly now. "Well, I don't mind telling you Donna Isabel's death is no disappointment to anyone. Anybody could see—"

"Stop!" Esteban was turning alternately red and white. "You seem to imply something outrageous."

"Now let us be sensible. I understand you perfectly, my boy. But an officer of the Guardia Civil may arrive at any moment and he will want to know how you came to be with your stepmother when she plunged into that trap. So prepare yourself."

Young Varona was watching his inquisitor now with a faintly speculative frown. When Cueto had finished, Esteban said:

"You would like me to confess to some black iniquity that would make us better friends, eh? Well, it so happens that I was not alone tonight, but that another person saw the poor woman's death and can bear me out in everything I say. No, Pancho, you overreach yourself. Now, then?" Esteban was quick-tempered, and for years he had struggled against an instinctive distrust and dislike of the plantation manager—"remember that I have become the head of this house, and your employer. You will do better to think of your own affairs than of mine. I intend to have a careful reckoning with you. I think you know I have a good head for figures." Turning his back upon the elder man, he walked away.

Now it did not occur to Cueto really

After Your Baby Is Born

Think Now About the Time to Come Afterwards.

When you hold in your arms your tiny new infant, be sure that you can feel that before its arrival you did all in your power to give to it a happy pre-natal influence. Scientists say that the thoughts and feelings of the expectant mother greatly affect the health and disposition of the future infant.

For over half a century thousands of women who have used the time-honored remedy, Mother's Friend, say that they entirely escaped nausea, nervousness and that peculiar distressing feeling so usual where nature is unaided. They thus preserved a wonderfully bright and happy disposition, which reflects so markedly upon the unborn child.

By the regular use of Mother's Friend the muscles are made and kept soft and elastic to readily yield to nature's demand for expansion without the usual wrenching strain. The nerves are not drawn upon, and as a consequence the expectant mother is calm and serene and the nights are not disturbed with nervous twitches, and the crisis is one of joy and happiness.

Write the Bradford Regulator Company, Dept. K, Lamar Building, Atlanta, Georgia, for their Motherhood Book, of value to every woman, and get a bottle of Mother's Friend from your druggist and begin a treatment that will bring real results.

to doubt the boy's innocence, though the circumstances of Donna Isabel's death were suspicious enough to raise a question in any mind; but in view of Esteban's threat he thought it wise to protect himself by setting a backfire.

As he sat on an old stone bench, moodily picturing the catastrophe as Esteban had described it, his attention fell upon an envelope at his feet. It was sealed; it was unaddressed. Cueto idly broke it open and began to read. Before he had gone far he started; then he cast a furtive glance about. But the place was secluded; he was unobserved. When he finished reading he rose, smiling. He no longer feared Esteban. On the contrary, he rather pitied the young fool; for here between his fingers was that which not only promised to remove the boy from his path forever, but to place in his hands the entire Varona estates.

One afternoon, perhaps a week later, Don Mario de Castano came puffing and blowing up to the quinta, demanding to see Rosa without a moment's delay. With a directness unusual even in him, Don Mario began:

"Rosa, my dear, you and Esteban have been discovered! I was at lunch with the commandante when I learned the truth. Through friendship I prevailed upon him to give you an hour's grace."

"What do you mean, Don Mario?" inquired the girl.

"Come, come!" the planter cried, impatiently. "Don't you see you can trust me? Heaven! The recklessness, the folly of young people! Could you not leave this insurrection to your elders? Or perhaps you thought it a matter of no great importance, an amusing thing—"

"Don Mario!" Rosa interrupted. "I don't know what you are talking about."

"You don't, eh?" The caller's wet cheeks grew redder; he blew like a porpoise. "Then call Esteban quickly! There is not a moment to lose." When the brother appeared De Castano blurted out at him accusingly: "Well, sir! A fine fix you've put yourself in. Perhaps you will be interested to learn that Colonel Fernandez has issued orders to arrest you and your sister as agents of the insurrectos."

"What?" Esteban drew back. Rosa turned white as a lily and laid a fluttering hand upon her throat.

"You two will sleep tonight in San Severino," grimly announced the rotund visitor. "You know what that means."

Rosa uttered a smothered cry. "Colonel Fernandez?" Don Mario proceeded, impressively, "did me this favor, knowing me to be a suitor for Rosa's hand. In spite of his duty and the evidence he—"

"Evidence? What evidence?" Esteban asked sharply.

"For one thing, your own letter to Lopez, the rebel, warning him to beware of the trap prepared for him in Santa Clara, and advising him of the government force at Sabanilla. Oh, don't try to deny it! I read it with my own eyes, and it means—death."

Rosa said faintly: "Esteban! I warned you."

Esteban was taken aback, but it was plain that he was not in the least frightened. "They haven't caught me yet," he laughed.

"You say they intend to arrest me also?" Rosa eyed the caller anxiously.

"Exactly!"

"Who accuses her, and of what?"

AMERICA MUST HELP ARMENIANS

Turkish Brutality Almost Inconceivable, Has Nearly Destroyed the Race—Infants Thrown Into Fire Where Mothers Were Being Roasted Alive by the Barbarians

MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT

Cleveland H. Dodge, Treasurer Armenian and Syrian Relief, 99 John St., New York.—The appropriation asked of Congress for handling food relief is not intended in any way to take the place of the subscription being asked for relief and rehabilitation in the Near East. I hope that this subscription will not in any way be interrupted or reduced. The need is immediate and very great.

WOODROW WILSON.

Details of the slaughter of Armenians during the world war is not a record of irresponsible reports but of documents sufficiently buttressed with provable facts to find credence in minds of officials of the British foreign office. The following extracts are from the British Blue Book on "The Treatment of Armenians," and need no introduction.

Read these and determine if the appeal for peoples of unhappy lands in "the Belgium of Asia" have right to part of our prosperity. Indiana's quota in the national drive for the Armenian and Syrian relief fund is equivalent to saving 21,000 lives; lives that have fortunately escaped the determination of the Turk to hunt down the race to extinction.

"On the 25th day of June the Turks surrounded the town of Bitlis and cut its communication with the neighboring Armenian villages; then most of the able-bodied men were taken from their families by domiciliary visits. During the following few days all the men under arrest were shot outside the town, and buried in deep trenches dug by the victims themselves. The young women and children were distributed among the rabble, and the remainder, the 'useless' lot were driven to the south and drowned in the Tigris. Any attempt at resistance, however brave, were easily quelled by the regular troops. The recalcitrants, after firing their last cartridges, either took poison by whole families or destroyed themselves in their homes in order not to fall into the hands of the Turks. 'It is in such gentlemanly fashion that the Turks disposed of about 15,000 Armenians.'"

In the town of Moush itself the Armenians, under leadership of Gotoyan and others, entrenched themselves in the churches and stone-built houses and fought for four days

Esteban demanded.

"That also I have discovered through the courtesy of Colonel Fernandez. Your accuser is none other than Pancho Cueto."

"Cueto!"

"Yes; he has denounced both of you as rebels, and the letter is only part of his proof, I believe. Now, then, you can guess why I am here. I am not without influence; I can save Rosa, but for you, Esteban, I fear I can do nothing. You must look out for yourself. Well? What do you say?"

When Esteban saw how pale his sister had grown, he took her in his arms, saying gently: "I'm sorry, dear. It's all my fault." Then to the merchant: "It's very good of you to warn us."

"Ha!" Don Mario fanned himself. "I'm glad you appreciate my efforts. It's a good thing to have the right kind of a friend. I'll marry Rosa within an hour, and I fancy my name will be a sufficient shield—"

Rosa turned to her elderly suitor and made a deep courtesy. "I am unworthy of the honor," said she. "You see, I—I do not love you, Don Mario."

"Love!" exploded the visitor. "God bless you! What has love to do with the matter? Esteban will have to ride for his life in ten minutes and your property will be seized. So you had better make yourself ready to go with me."

But Rosa shook her head.

"Eh? What alls you? What do you expect to do?"

"I shall go with Esteban," said the girl.

This calm announcement seemed to stupefy De Castano. He sat down heavily in the nearest chair, and with his wet handkerchief poised in one pudgy hand he stared fixedly at the speaker. His eyes were round and in self-defense. The Turkish artillery, manned by German officers, made short work of all the Armenian positions. Every one of the Armenians, leaders as well as men, were killed fighting, and when the silence of death reigned over the ruins of churches and the rest, the Moslem rabble made a descent upon the women and children and drove them out of the town into large camps which had already been prepared for the peasant women and children.

The shortest method for disposing of the women and children concentrated in the various camps was to burn them. Fire was set to large wooden sheds in Alidjan, Megrakom, Khaskegh, and other Armenian villages and these absolutely helpless women and children roasted to death. Many went mad and threw their children away. Some knelt down and prayed amid the flames in which their bodies were burning. Others shrieked and cried for help which came from nowhere. And the executioners, who seemed to have been unmoved by this unparalleled savagery, grasped infants by one leg and hurled them into the fire, calling out to the burning mothers: "Here are your lions!"

—O—
This is the testimony of Sister D. A., German Red Cross nurse in Turkey, as set down in Document 64 of the British Blue Book on "Treatment of Armenians."

The Armenian children in the German orphanage at H. were sent away with the rest. "My orders," said the Vali (official) "are to deport all Armenians. I cannot make an exception of these." He announced, however, that a German orphanage was to be established for any children that remained and shortly after he called on Sister D. A. and asked her to visit it. She found about 700 Armenian children in a good building. For every twelve or fifteen children there was one Armenian nurse, and they were well clothed and fed. "See what care the government is taking of the Armenians," the Vali said and she returned home surprised and pleased.

But when she visited the orphanage several days later there were only thirteen of the 700 left—the rest had disappeared. They had been taken to a lake six hours' journey by road from the town and drowned.

Three hundred orphan children were subsequently collected and suffered the same fate as their predecessors.

bulging, the sweat streamed unheeded from his temples. He resembled some queer bloated marine monster just emerged from the sea and momentarily dazzled by the light.

"You— You're mad," he finally gasped. "Esteban, tell her what it means."

But this Esteban could not do, for he himself had not the faintest notion of what was in store for him. War seemed to him a glorious thing; he had been told that the hills were peopled with patriots. He was very young, his heart was ablaze with hatred for the Spaniards and for Pancho Cueto. He longed to risk his life for a free Cuba. Therefore he said: "Rosa shall do as she pleases. If we must be exiles we shall share each other's hardships. It will not be for long."

"Idiot!" stormed the fat man. "Better that you gave her to the sharks below San Severino. There is no law, no safety for women outside of the cities. The island is in anarchy. These patriots you talk about are the blacks, the mulattoes, the—lowest, laziest savages in Cuba."

"Please! Don Mario!" the girl pleaded. "I cannot marry you, for—I love another."

"Eh?"

"I love another. I'm betrothed to O'Reilly, the American—and he's coming back to marry me."

De Castano twisted himself labor-

ously out of his chair and waddled toward the door. He was purple with rage and mortification. On the threshold he paused to wheeze: "Very well, then. Go! I'm done with both of you. I would have lent you a hand with this rascal Cueto, but now he will fall heir to your entire property. Well, it is a time for handouts! I—I—" Unable to think of a parting speech sufficiently bitter to match his disappointment, Don Mario plunged out into the sunlight, muttering and stammering to himself.

Within an hour the twins were on their way up the Yumuri, toward the home of Asensio and Evangelina; for it was thither that they naturally turned. It was well that they had made haste, for as they rode down into the valley, up the other side of the hill from Matanzas came a squad of the Guardia Civil, and at its head rode Pancho Cueto.

Hostilities Are at an End.

Jane had broken her second doll that morning, and mother, very much provoked, was putting the careless baby through the third degree when from the depths of the apron in which the sweet little face was buried came the words: "Mother, did you know the war was over?"

WEAKNESS REMAINS LONG AFTER

Influenza

Reports Show That Strength, Energy and Ambition Return Very Slowly to Grippe Patients.

After an attack of influenza, doctors advise that nature be assisted in its building-up process by the use of a good tonic—one that will not only put strength and endurance into the body, but will also help to build up and strengthen the run-down cells of the brain.

One of the most highly recommended remedies to put energy into both body and brain is Bio-feren—your physician knows the formula—it is printed below.

There's iron in Bio-feren—the kind of iron that makes red blood corpuscles and creates vigor. There is lecithin also; probably the best brain invigorator known to science. Then there is good old reliable gentian, that brings back your lagging appetite.

There are other ingredients that help to promote good health, as you can see by reading this formula, not forgetting kolo, that great agent that puts the power of endurance into weak people.

Taken altogether Bio-feren is a splendid active tonic that will greatly help any weak, run-down person to regain normal strength, energy, ambition and endurance.

Bio-feren is sold by all reliable druggists and is inexpensive. For weakness after influenza patients are advised to take two tablets after each meal and one at bed time—seven a day, until health, strength and vigor are fully restored.

It will not fail to help you and if for any reason you are dissatisfied with results your druggist is authorized to return your money upon request—without any red tape of any kind.

Note to physicians: There is no secret about the formula of Bio-feren, it is printed on every package. Here it is: Lecithin; Calcium Glycero-phosphate; Iron Peptonate, Manganese Peptonate; Ext. Nux. Vomica; Powdered Gentian; Phenolphthalein; Olearin Capsicum. Kolo.

TREE FOR EVERY FALLEN SOLDIER

Lieber Proposal Attracts International Attention—Formation of Association Suggested.

Richard Lieber, chairman of the Indiana State Park Commission, encouraged by the approval given to his recent suggestion to the American Forestry Association of the "Indiana plan" for commemorating by tree planting the part taken by American soldiers in the war with Germany, plans to propose in an address at Delphi next Tuesday evening that the ninety-two counties of Indiana immediately organize a working association to carry the plan into effect in the state.

The "Indiana plan," which developed from a suggestion to Governor Goodrich through Mr. Lieber by the American Forestry Association, that trees be planted along the highways to commemorate Indiana soldiers who gave their lives to the American cause in France, is that these trees be planted in a park in each county, and that every man from the county who served in the American military forces be honored by a tree displaying his name.

The Veterans' Association of London, having read American notices of this "Indiana plan," has inquired of the American Forestry Association for full particulars of the proposal which it plans to suggest for adoption in England. This information has been sent to Mr. Lieber from the Washington offices of the Forestry Association.

The proposal made to the American Forestry Association from Mr. Lieber, after his conference with Governor Goodrich, was that each county obtain a suitable tract of land and plant there an oak, ash, elm or some other tree symbolical of strength, to be known as the "War Oak," "War Ash," or some such suitable name. The tract would then be planted with suitable varieties of fine forest trees and the soldiers from the county who had given their lives in the country's service would be commemorated by a shield hung on a small white fence to be placed about a tree that would commemorate that soldier's service. In a similar manner the grove would bear the name of every soldier from the county who has served his country.

Mr. Lieber is to speak in Delphi at the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Bone. In his address Mr. Lieber will tell of the significance of trees in their relationship to human beings throughout the history of the world; of their close relationship to religious developments, and of the fine sentimentality always attached to trees; to illustrate how appropriate would be a memorial to the heroic dead of the country's military forces in the form of a splendid grove of forest trees.

Such a grove, Mr. Lieber wishes to emphasize, would provide an individual memorial or each and every man in service and as a memorial to the soldiers who lost their lives they would constitute a particularly fitting symbol, since trees, like men, fell before the shells of modern guns.

The practical execution of the plan, Mr. Lieber will suggest, should be undertaken by an association representing each county and organized especially for this purpose. The association would employ the services of a landscape engineer to lay out the plans, and each county would make arrangements to obtain suitable land for carrying out the planting of these trees. The parks or groves would be so planned as to make them suitable for public meetings, especially meetings of a memorial character, and would be laid out with driveways to give them added usefulness as a public recreation spot that would carry forever the tribute of the home neighborhoods to their soldiers.

FOYERS IN FRANCE.

Four departments of the French Government have asked the American Y. W. C. A. to open social and recreation centers for girls employed by them—Finance, Commerce, War and Labor.

Lieutenant Poncet of the Ministry of Labor recently requested that this Y. W. C. A. work be begun for girls in his offices after seeing the social and recreation centers which had been opened at the request of the Ministry of War. Sixteen centers of this kind are operated in six cities in France. Three of them are in Paris.

The last of these Foyers des Allies is for girls who are working in the Department of Labor. It is far down the Seine, under the shadow of the Eiffel Tower, and overlooks the Quai d'Orsay.

The rooms are bright and cheerful, with chintz hangings and cushions, comfortable chairs, reading and writing tables and a fireplace. A kitchen has equipment so that girls can prepare meals for themselves. They go to the foyer for their two hour luncheon time, for social evenings and for classes in English.

400,000 YANKS ARE Y. W. C. A. VISITORS

Four hundred thousand persons and more served in the cafeteria in one year is the record of the Y. W. C. A. Hostess House at Camp Lewis, American Lake, Wash.

The majority of the 400,000 diners were mothers, wives, sweethearts and friends who went to the camp to visit their soldiers. The remainder were soldiers themselves who broke the monotony of "chow" with home cooked meals. In addition to all these guests, 25,000 little children were cared for in the nursery and the rest room served 70,000 tired wives and mothers.

The workers at the information desk received and answered 97,000 questions varying from how to get the best connections to a destination clear across the continent, the rates of soldiers' insurance and the kind of canteen a girl bride should have in her living room now that Private John is coming home from France. Eleven thousand of these queries required telephone conversations with various company commanders relative to hunting up a soldier whose parents had arrived unexpectedly.

CATALONIA GREAT SEA POWER

Spanish Province Centuries Ago Held
Undisputed Naval Sway—People
Still Proud of Achievements.

The Moors were expelled from Barcelona in the ninth century. Catalonia had more than four centuries' start over Seville and six over Malaga. It is little wonder, therefore, that Spanish enterprise, if such a term is applicable, is seen at its best in Catalonia, because it has had a real opportunity to express itself. Catalonia has always looked beyond its geographical limits. It has, in fact, looked seaward. It was on the waves that the men of Barcelona found riches and glory. They were the rivals of the Pisans, Genoese and Venetians, and Barcelona can boast of a naval history as great perhaps as theirs. Catalonia for a time held sway of the sea, and it was only upon the consolidation of Spain at the beginning of the sixteenth century and the rise of the great modern states that the city was eclipsed as a sea power. The Catalonians, proud of their achievements, looked with little favor upon Columbus' discovery of America, an enterprise which had been promoted by neighboring Castile.

Lucky Kiss.

A man named Winch, a butcher of Sydney, N. S. W., recently took the liberty of kissing a handsome girl who was one of his customers. She resented the affront, and Winch was prosecuted. He was fined heavily by the board of magistrates, and lengthy notices of the case appeared in the press. The publicity given to the proceedings happened to attract the notice of a firm of solicitors in Sydney, who had been appointed trustees of certain property which had been left to Winch by a distant relative some years before, the solicitors up to then having been unable to find any trace of the missing heir. Winch was communicated with by the firm, and, having duly established his identity, became the possessor of a snug little fortune.
